Mr. Dulles Resigns

The resignation of John Foster Dulles from the high office of secretary of state was inevitable under the circumstances. It is a tribute to his stamina, his courage and his great ability that at 71 years of age, with his body ravaged by cancer, he could still be an important figure in world af-

He undoubtedly is one of the greatest secretaries of state of all time. No other person who served in this office was beset by so many problems and it is difficult to think of anyone who could have handled the work better. President Eisenhower has given his estimate of Mr. Duiles in these words, "The best secretary of state I have ever known."

Mr. Dulles spent most of his life preparing himself for this office. He was born in Watertown, N. Y., Feb. 25, 1888, the son of a Presbyterian minister and there was some expectation that he would enter the ministry. But his maternal grandfather, John Watson Foster, who had served as secretary of state under President Benjamin Harrison, is credited with directing him into the field of international law. When he was 19 years of age he accompanied his grandfather to the second peace conference at the Hague and served as his secretary. Because of his wide knowledge of French and diplomatic usage he was made one of the conference secretaries.

He was only 29 years old when he received a special assignment from President Woodrow Wilson to negotiate with Central American countries for the protection of the Panama Canal during World

He made a fortune in the practice of international law in New York. This work required much travel and kept him in contact with many foreign countries involved in controversies on the world scene. Although he was a Republican, he found time to serve as counsellor to three Democratic administrations. While serving in this capacity under Secretary of State Dean Acheson, he proposed and received the assignment to work out a Japanese peace treaty which would be acceptable to most of the nations involved and which would avoid the Russian obstruction tactics which then were apparent. Sept. 8, 1951, was a day of victory for Dulles. Then 48 nations signed the treaty at San Francisco. Russia, Poland and Czechoslovakia were represented but refused to sign.

Dulles was nearly 65 years old when he achieved his lifetime ambition by becoming secretary of state. On that occasion he indicated he was well aware of the troubled times ahead with these words, "It is what I have always wanted but I am not sure that I want it any longer." Oddly enough an incident which brought down upon him the greatest criticism in his career gives the clearest picture of his fundamental stand against the reds and indicates also the reason for his success. In 1956 Life magazine published an article quoting him

You have to take chances for peace, just as you must take chances for war. Some say that we were brought to the very verge of war. The ability to get to the verge of war without getting into the war is a necessary art. If you try to run away from it, if you are scared to go to the brink, you are lost. We had to look it square in the face - on the question of enlarging the Korean war, on the question of getting into the Indo-China war, on the question of Formosa. We walked to the brink and we looked it in the face. We took strong action.

The interview brought a storm of criticism from many directions. But he stood fast, never denying the statement. This was perhaps the most severe test he was given on the home front. Many Democrats and some Republicans interpreted the statement as boasting by the secretary. They ridiculed it and they denounced him as "the misguided missile" and "brinksman." They referred to his "brinksmanship" in derogatory tones but Dulles' day

His picture of the firm stand against the reds as presented in the magazine interview soon became more understandable to the people. When President Eisenhower refused to back down, or to yield an inch in the controversy over the Quemoy islands. he was criticized by the same people who had blasted the Dulles statement. It was folly to risk nuclear war over those worthless islands, the critics cried, but the Eisenhower-Dulles position was that it was folly to run from the reds at any point. One step backward merely meant further crowding by the reds, they warned. The president stood firm and the reds yielded. The same position won again at Berlin. In all cases, of course, the policy pursued was that of "brinksmanship" which had been so wrongly condemned by the Dulles critics. Today it is applauded on all sides.

Mr. Dulles' courageous stand has won again and again in his dealings with the reds. He has not only kept the peace of the world secure, but he has also pointed a way to the possible solution of the cold war. We know now that we can never win by running away from the threatening reds. It now appears to be settled American policy to stand firm and to yield nothing under red pressure.

Appleton public library this week is who were more than casually interested in the celebration of National Library week.

"Wake Up and Read" is this year's theme. Promotion for the event, while carried on in many ways, cannot be emphasized more strongly than by the fact that libraries are working quietly throughout the year to keep a free people informed.

Man's deepest desire is to understand. He is stimulated by a steady supply of books, newspapers and pamphlets. Books can tell him the best way to build a birdhouse or explain the basic thinkings of the world's eminent philosophers.

But in many places of the world other men have used control of the book medium to shackle the highest hopes of their fellow men — understanding the truth.

It was Hitler who distorted the facts that history creates and the infamous German dictator easily aroused and incited his country into World war II once that nation's writers were under control and libraries closed.

It was Stalin who began having history rewritten to suit his whims, molding facts to his patterns to ensiave a race of people with the most effective human chain there is - control of what people read.

ROUSE CASE

Democrats did all in their power to thwart the nomination by a Republican governor of John Rouse, a Republican politician, to the state industrial commission. The case has many parallels with the Schimenz fight. Rouse was a lawyer, ostensibly qualified. He was a veteran party worker who had a claim for patronage that the Republican governor recognized.

At about the same time legislative Democrats, prodded by organized labor and with the support of some defecting Republicans, came within an eye-lash of repudiating the renomination of Chairman Lawrence Gooding to the state labor relations board where he had served for a considerable

Youngsters of all ages love parties . . . and a party to most young fry means food . . . but whether the event is for the birthday of Johnny or Susie or to honor the babyto-arrive . . . or for no reason at all except maybe it's spring . . . the best way to start is with an idea, a theme, and a menu that's both clever and taste appealing ... just right for the party you have in mind.

What Member of the Kindergarten set could resist this intriguing pussy cat cone? Easy enough to make. an occasion strictly for the ing. Served with a spring-time refrigerator until set. Cut Dip a medium sized and a smaller scoop of ice cream for each cone: roll in coconut. On a foil covered cardboard build the cat by placing a small scoop atop the bigger one. Make a face by using raisins for eyes, slivers of almonds for whiskers and candy corn for ears. Store in freezer. When ready to serve, place ice cream cat in flat bottomed cone. Use peppermint candy cane for tail. Serve in back of a candy stick fence. Good idea is to use a piece of foamed polystyrene for base; it will hold the fence posts and can half, down the center. Mix be covered with green colored coconut.

League Asks Local Vehicle Assessment

Measure Is Main Tax Relief Bill of Municipalities Unit

Post-Creacent Madison Bureau

Madison - A proposal to return the automobile and all other motor vehicles to the local tax rolls, a plan of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities, has often been broached in the legislature with little response from the lawmakers.

The League is sponsoring a new attempt as the keystone of its bundle of bills called "property tax relief" bills. It may have more backing as a result of that popular theme.

The municipal organization wants to retain the present state registration system-originally intended as an alternative to local property taxation of motor vehicles. The League wants to superimpose upon it what it calls a "municipal vehicle excise tax" of two per cent of the depreciated value of all vehicles. 11 Million Vehicles

There are about 1,250.000 Wisconsin motor vehicles that would be subject to such an act. Reliable figures on their depreciated worth, including trucks and other commercial vehicles, are not immediately available but a $25 million local government income rebult from such a levy is held a conservative estimate.

The depreciated values would be figured by the state 🖺 motor vehicle department, under a table of classifications 1 in value steps of $200.

A motor vehicle owner would not be able to get state registration plates without proof of having satisfied the local tax assessment.

Depreciation Explained The bill proposes deprecia-. tion reductions from original market values of: first year model 85 per cent; second—70 🛊 per cent; third—55 per cent; 1 fourth-40 per cent; fifth-30 per cent; sixth-20 per cent: seventh-15 per cent; eighth -10 per cent. and ninth and each successive year five per cent, with a minimum for any vehicle of $2. in other sessions there have been proposals to permit local taxation of motor vehicles at municipal option, but the League has discarded that alternative. Even that compromise plan in other years drew little support from legislators who were apprehensive about ! the reactions of thousands of their motoring constituents.

Spices, Herbs. Flavor Broth For Shrimp

follow the French chef's practice of poaching or simmering shrimp in a court bouillon, a, broth usually flavored withspices, herbs and vegetables' such as onion, celery and pars-;

This flavoring doesn't overpower the delicate flavor of shellfish, but does add a "certain something 'that enhances† the shrimp dish. A brand-new idea is to use a bottled lemonlime carbonated beverage which adds the zesty tang of, citrus fruits to the shrimp. Cooked in this citrus broth, the shrimp may be served hot or cold with garlic butter or a spicy cocktail sauce
